Fields campaigners have shown real commitment

HOW heartening it was last Saturday evening to see such a huge turnout for a quiz at St Dunstan's Church Hall, held to raise funds for the Save Chaucer Fields campaign.

Supporters of SCF can also take heart from the call made this week on YouTube by Prince William for the British people to protect our outdoor spaces.

On a less happy note, the Daily Telegraph reports of strenuous efforts by the property industry to lobby the coalition government to 'relax' planning laws, allowing building on greenfield and semi-natural sites like Chaucer Fields.

Official records show industry representatives have met ministers responsible for planning regulations 28 times since last year's election.

We may not have the financial clout of big business but the supporters of Save Chaucer Fields have shown their commitment to this cause.
